

To whom it may concern at the FCC,
I am an XM Radio subscriber and couldn't be happier with the service that I gladly pay for each month. Unlike the local channels that are available, I have a wide variety of music available with XM that is not available on the local radio stations. The local radio stations only play 20 songs over and over again that only teenagers listen to. I don't like corporate radio for this very specific reason.

I want adult oriented radio that offers a wide variety of music, talk radio, news, and educational programs... not repetative, advertisement flooded radio. My two cars have XM Radio and I am considering getting it for my work office, too. Instant Traffic & Weather is not provided for my city (San Diego) at this time, but I am looking forward to the service in the future. I respectfully request that you take into consideration the desires of the American public and hear our voice. XM Radio services are excellent and should be allowed to expand. Corporate owned radio stations need the competition of XM Radio because their services are severely lacking.

Sincerely,
Georgia Shute
